

3 Reasons Why I Believe I May be the Candidate You are Looking For

Dear Hiring Manager Name,

I am the candidate you are looking for as my personality aligns with the mission statement your school district has expressed for their teachers: "work collaboratively, [be] competent, effective, and committed to personal growth." I have had various opportunities to work with others, and I have always been good at complimenting a group. In school, many teachers would place me with the "difficult group," knowing I could work effectively with all types of people.

My ability to work well with others has enabled me to be a competent, effective teacher. After working with me, people often use three words to describe me:

- Dedicated
- Vivacious
- Personable

With every endeavor I undertake, I fully dedicate myself to doing my best, and I do so with my vivacious, friendly, personable energy. This dedication has molded me into a competent teacher, and my vivacious energy and personable nature makes my lessons effective as I students enjoy learning.

The hard-work I put into my first three years has helped me to improve and grow, which is the third reason why I will make a great employee. I will grow and improve because I value evaluations from administrators and students. During my first three years, I increased significantly in classroom management and organization. Knowing these were my areas of weakness, I enrolled in professional development courses and read material geared towards those areas.

My desire for perfection leads forth in everything I do. I can guarantee you, the students, and the staff of Centennial High that I will do my best at every task I undertake. Please contact me to schedule an interview.

Thanks for your time and consideration,
